Gary Osweiler, DVM, PhD, DABVT

The Department of Veterinary Diagnostic and Production Animal Medicine provides consultation, analytical services and research on the recognition and remediation of health effects by mycotoxins affecting domestic animals. Recent mycotoxins of interest and economic importance include aflatoxins, deoxynivalenol, fumonisins and zearalenone, all of which economically important in North American agricultural production.

Publications